This website claims that effective treatment is available for premature ejaculation, but it mentions only dapoxetine. The effect of this message on men or women visiting the website because they are confronted with this problem is entirely predictable. The truth is that the primary policy for premature ejaculation is still a talk which also addresses psychological factors. Such a talk may also address the suitability of, and contra-indications for, medicinal treatment. The Geneesmiddelenbulletin endorses the conclusion expressed in La Revue Prescrire, that dapoxetine should not be prescribed.

References*

*The literature refers to the Dutch text